The project is a multidisciplinary enquiry into the extraterritorial application of international human rights law. It started in February 2013.

Leverhulme Trust (UK), Philip Leverhulme Prize 2010

£70,000 to fund research expenditure over the course of 2 or 3 years

Around 25 Prizes are awarded annually to individuals under 40 based at UK institutions who are judged to be 'outstanding scholars who have made a substantial and recognized contribution to their particular field of study, recognized at an international level, and where the expectation is that their greatest achievement is yet to come.' Each year the Trust stipulates around five disciplines, one of which the recipients should be working in. 2010 was the first year that law was named as one of the five.

See <http://www.leverhulme.ac.uk/news/awards/plp.cfm>; <http://www.leverhulme.ac.uk/news/newsletter.cfm> (January 2011 issue); <http://www.ucl.ac.uk/news/news-articles/1011/101111602>

The funds were used to provide research leave, and cover other research-related expenses.

UK Arts and Humanities Research Council, Research Grant 2005 – 8

£111,828 (full amount applied for) to fund research assistance and other research expenses over 2 years.

Final report was graded 'outstanding' by the Council's assessors.

Leverhulme Trust (UK), Research Fellowship 2004

£21,000 (maximum amount) to fund research assistance

See http://www.leverhulme.org.uk/news/raac_awards_new/2004, page 8

British Academy, Small Grant 2004

£5,000 (maximum amount) to fund research assistance

Nuffield Foundation (UK), Small Grant 2004

£7,500 (maximum amount) to fund research assistance
